JUNE 2013

This little story caused me some amusement - but how true to life it is - and although the butt of this story is a man, in different circumstances it could be a woman (maybe even me) who needs reminding that grumbling doesn't really get you anywhere!

"It was a perfect day for an outing. There was only one snag. One man kept grumbling - the coach went too quickly or too slowly. His meat at lunch was tough and there wasn't enough of it. His tea was too sweet. The grumbler was a man standing six foot two in his socks. In the first few hours he caused irritation to all the other folk who were out to enjoy every minute.

Then a little old lady changed everything. When the giant murmured something about the coach driver, she called out, 'Don't take any notice of him! He'll grow out of it when he's bigger!'

From then on the big, but small-minded man never expressed a complaint!"

Another little gem from one of The Friendship Books of Francis Gay
